

Abstract

The present invention relates to a laundry and cleaning composition comprising a detergent ingredient and a product of reaction between a primary and/or secondary amine and a perfume component. By the present invention, there is obtained a release of the active component over a longer period of time than by the use of the active itself.